[...]fields where chaos reigned supreme And Nature frowned aghast, By patient-toil have fruitage borne And blossomed fragrance cast. The wreck of spheres by traction s laws Hurled wildly into space, May gather atoms round itself And find some resting place Where it may serve creation s end, And mong the planets roll, True to the laws of gravity That marks its outer pole. The mind and soul can never Within themselves find rest, When all the sin s pollutions Are harbored in the breast. Then sow good seed, brave teacher, And deeply plant with care, That both here and hereafter Rich harvest it may bear. The sowing may be silent- It may be but a tear, Its strength is in its purpose, Its aim must be sincere. It should not be a rite or creed, But wider far than these, It should encompass God and man, Home and antipodes. To learn the truths of science, Know tables, books and charts, To analyze the potent thrill That fires all earnest hearts, To revel in the mysteries That lie...
