However, it appears from Mr. Greaves s Letter from Constantinople dated August 2, 1638, that he believed there was a treasure of Greek and Latin authors in the Seraglio; for having observed, that amongst other manuscripts he had procured Ptolemy s Almagest, the fairest book he had ever seen, stolen by a Spahy from thence, he writes thus: Whereby you see there is a possibility of having also those Greek and Latin authors, which I mentioned in my former Letters to be buried in the Seraglio, if they were handsomely followed by an ambassador. Mr. Greaves had a design to have gone to Mount Athos, which is about four days journey by sea from Constantinople, whither he should have been recommended by the patriarch, and have had liberty of entering into all libraries in that place, in order to collect a catalogue of such books as either were not printed, or else by the help of some there might have been more correctly published. These the patriarch proposed (by dispensing with the anathemas, which his predecessors had laid upon all Greek libraries, so, secure the books from the Latins) to have presented to archbishop Laud, for the better prosecution of his Grace s designs in the end. The word here is que effaced in the original Letter. tion of Greek authors. But the patriarch s death prevented Mr. Greaves from this journey (sic). In his Letter...
